

Listen to L&G's adviser podcast episode on later life divorce

According to research from our Ambassador Legal & General, 30% of UK divorces take place after the age of 50<sup>1</sup>. By which stage, many couples have built up significant wealth, making the division of assets complex and costly for your clients.

However, only 12% of divorcing couples aged 50+ sought financial advice. In this episode of the Legal & General Just Covered podcast, you will hear from later life lending adviser, Manjit Kaur from the Mortgage Mum and pensions expert and financial planner, Fiona Tait.

Sharing insights into their financial advice experiences with divorcing clients, they discuss the impact later life divorce can have on your client's two largest assets – pensions and property.

Here are three takeaways from the episode:

- The value of advising clients earlier on in the divorce process
- How to expand your professional connections
- The impact later life divorce will have on your client's retirement

If you're working with clients in later life, then this episode is for you. You can watch the full episode of 'Divorce after 50: pensions and property' here.
